

Who are You going to call?!?

When a disaster has damaged your home?

Who are you going to call to report your home's damage and the loss you experienced after a disaster has occurred?

Damage collection starts at the lowest level of government, the municipality. Damage reporting starts with each individual citizen.

Municipalities are responsible for collecting damage reports from their residents. Citizens are responsible for knowing the process that is in place for collecting those reports. To find out, contact your municipal office and ask for the procedures used to collect damages from citizens during a disaster. Your municipality contact information can be found in the blue government pages of your telephone book.

Reporting damage and loss is crucial in helping you and your community recover from any disaster. Knowing to whom you should report your damage and loss will help move this process along more quickly.

Don't wait! Call your municipality today. Know where to report your damage and loss if disaster strikes you.
