OPINION

I. Statement of Case

Plaintiff Jesse A. Colwell (hereinafter referred to as Colwell) is an eighty-eight (88) year-old man residing in Oakland Township, Susquehanna County. (Plf. Cmp. ¶ 4.) Colwell contends that defendants Joseph L. Roberts and Jeanette M. Roberts (hereinafter collectively referred to as Roberts) fraudulently induced the transfer of a one-half (1/2) interest in Colwell's 398-acre farm property to Roberts. (Id. Count 1.)<sup>1</sup> Colwell concedes that he suffers various ailments including coronary artery disease, myocardial infarction, heart failure, blood pressure problems, urinary blockage, enlarged prostate, poor eyesight and hearing loss. (Id. ¶ 17.)

On February 25, 2019, Colwell was deposed by Roberts' legal counsel. The deposition was never concluded as a result of Roberts' legal counsel's concerns regarding Colwell's competency. Thereafter, Colwell's legal counsel sought to depose Colwell to complete the deposition process. In response, Roberts filed a motion for a protective order seeking to prohibit any further deposition of Colwell until the issue of Colwell's competency has been resolved. The parties have submitted their respective briefs with supporting documentation. The matter is now ripe for disposition.

II. Discussion

Pennsylvania Rule of Civil Procedure 4012 provides a mechanism for a party to seek a protective order to prohibit a deposition if it is necessary to prevent "unreasonable annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, burden or expense." Pa. R. Civ. P. 4012(a)(1). Roberts seeks a protective order to prevent Colwell's counsel from taking Colwell's deposition until Roberts has received additional medical records relating to Colwell's medical and mental health condition. As the moving party, Roberts has the burden of demonstrating good cause to support the issuance of a protective order, i.e., that harm would result in the absence of a protective order. See Platinum Corp. v. Blong, 43 Pa. D. & C.4th 445, 447 (Fayette County 1998) (finding that moving party “must produce, at a minimum, some evidence upon which a court can make a determination that harm will result” in the absence of a protective order); Spence v. Caesars Paradise Stream Resort, 20 Pa. D. & C. 4th 426, 429 (Monroe County 1994) (“In absence of any specific rule creating that burden, the moving party, under general rules of procedure, must bear it.”); Ornsteen v. Bass, 50 Pa. D. & C.3d 371, 374 (Phila. County 1988) ( noting that “‘good cause’ requires, at a minimum, some evidence upon which a court can make a determination that harm will result from disclosure.”); Bealla v. Zuba, 4 Pa. D. & C.2d 545, 548 (Luzerne County 1955).

Roberts has failed to demonstrate “good cause” necessary to support the issuance of a protective order. Roberts has not articulated how the deposition of Colwell would result in “unreasonable annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, burden or expense.” The gist of Roberts’ argument is that that Colwell may not be competent to testify and that Roberts should have Colwell’s medical records prior to his deposition so as to assess his competency. This argument fails for a number of reasons.

First, if Colwell is not competent, the possession or non-possession of his medical records will make no difference whatsoever at any deposition. Second, to the extent that the medical records fail to address Colwell’s competency, Roberts will have the ability through the deposition to test the competency. To the extent that Colwell suffers from some kind of dementia, a deposition will create a record as to the extent and nature of the dementia – and whether such dementia itself calls into question Colwell’s competence to testify as a witness.

Significantly, this is not a situation where Colwell’s legal counsel seeks an order to protect Colwell from being deposed based upon his medical and/or mental health condition. Colwell’s counsel is seeking to depose Colwell – and Roberts is contending that the deposition will somehow create “unreasonable annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, burden or expense” for Roberts. Given Colwell’s advance age and medical problems, the need to preserve his testimony – to the extent that Colwell has the ability to competently testify – is significant. To the extent that Roberts is concerned regarding Colwell’s competency, Roberts can preserve this issue by raising the objection at the time of the deposition. Pa. R. Civ. P. 4016(b).<sup>2</sup> For these reasons, the request for a protective order will be denied.

<sup>2</sup> To the extent that Roberts contends that additional information is required to determine Colwell’s competence to testify, Roberts has the ability to request a mental examination of Colwell. Pa. R. Civ. P. 4010(a)(2). During the deposition of Colwell, Roberts’ counsel will have the ability to develop a record as to the competence of Colwell and whether good cause exists for the court to order a mental health examination of Colwell. Pa. R. Civ. P. 4010(a)(3).
